cousin was murdered. Family members noticed that he had become visibly depressed. He began to abuse painkillers and unfortunately turned to selling small amounts of drugs to support himself.

On February 4, 2008, Mr. Green appeared on a two-count indictment charging him with distribution of cocaine base. Only two months later, he pleaded guilty to both counts of the indictment without challenging the government's case by motion or otherwise. On July 11, 2008, he will stand before the Court for sentencing under two provisions of the Sentencing Guidelines that have drawn especially sharp criticism from the federal bench, one of them having drawn biting criticism from the Sentencing Commission itself: the crack guidelines and the career offender provision. Collectively, these Guidelines provisions have generated a wealth of legal challenges, empirical research, legislative hearings, Sentencing Commission revisions and scholarly debate. Neither of these provisions can be honestly reconciled with 18 U.S.C. §3553(a), and neither should control the sentence in Mr. Green's case. For these reasons and those that follow, Mr. Green respectfully requests that the Court sentence him to seven years.

2. Background

This case arose from a narcotics investigation in Richmond. Ironically, the investigation was directed towards someone named "Rodney," not Mr. Green. When a confidential informant drove into Mr. Green's neighborhood looking for Rodney, she learned that Rodney was elsewhere and she decided to attempt to purchase rock cocaine from Mr. Green. The informant ultimately made two purchases from Mr. Green: one of 9 grams and the other of 4.4 grams. Mr. Green was arrested on a federal warrant on February 4, 2008.

3. Comments on the Pre-Sentence Report

¶ 6. This paragraph suggests that the operation was designed to conduct a controlled purchase from Mr. Green. In fact, the target of the investigation was someone named "Rodney," not Mr. Green.

¶¶ 36, 37. The probation officer assigns one point each to these misdemeanor driving offenses. These convictions were submitted by the government and not included in the draft presentence report. It appears that these convictions were suffered on the same date, July 2, 2001, and there is no evidence of an intervening arrest. As such they are counted as a single sentence under USSG §4A1.2(a)(2). It also appears that Mr. Green was arrested for being a felon in possession of a firearm on June 5, 2001, and sentenced on July 2, 2001. PSR, ¶ 35. It is not clear whether there was an intervening arrest between the misdemeanor driving offense(s) and the felon in possession of a firearm offense. If not, §4A1.2(a)(2) could operate to render all three convictions related for purposes of computing criminal history.

¶¶ 42, 43. It is not clear that Mr. Green's criminal history is Category VI.

4. Sentencing Recommendation

The Components of A Reasonable Sentence

I.

United States v. Booker, 543 U.S. 220 (2005), directs the sentencing court to impose an appropriate sentence, unencumbered by offense levels, criminal history, or the availability of authorized downward departures. Under the post-Booker discretionary sentencing regime, there is no longer any question that the advisory Guideline range is only one factor among several that this Court is required to consider in determining what constitutes a reasonable sentence. The Court is free to disagree with Guideline ranges and policy considerations. See Kimbrough v. United States, 128 S.Ct. 558, 57 (2007). While circuit courts of appeal may apply a presumption of reasonableness to sentences within the applicable Guidelines range, Rita v. United States, 127 S.Ct. 2456 (2007), the district court "does not enjoy the benefit of a legal presumption that the Guidelines sentence should apply." Id. at 2465. Nor is it required to use a formulaic approach yielding a mathematical justification of non-Guidelines sentences. Gall v. United States, 128 S.Ct. 586, 596 (2007). Rather, it must exercise "reasoned sentencing judgment, resting upon an effort to filter the Guidelines' general advice through § 3553(a)'s list of factors." Rita, 127 S.Ct. at 2469.

Sentencing discretion, therefore, is not a hollow term of art. The courts of appeal are limited to reviewing sentences for abuse of discretion and may not presume that a sentence which may be much lower than that suggested by the Guidelines is unreasonable. Gall, 128 S.Ct. at 597. To the contrary, Gall emphasized the importance of deferring to the judgment of the sentencing courts, explaining:

The sentencing judge is in a superior position to find facts and judge their import under § 3553(a) in the individual case. The judge sees and hears the evidence, makes credibility determinations, has full knowledge of the facts and gains insights not conveyed by the record. "The sentencing judge has access to, and greater familiarity with, the individual case and the individual defendant before him than the Commission or the appeals court."

Id. at 597-98 (quoting Rita v. United States, 127 S.Ct. 2456, 2469 (2007)).

18 U.S.C. § 3553(a), the wellspring from which a reasonable sentence must be drawn, "contains an overarching provision," see Kimbrough, 128 S.Ct. at 570, directing the district court to impose a sentence that is "sufficient, but not greater than necessary, to comply with" the purposes of sentencing. Section § 3553(a) (emphasis added). Those purposes include the need:

- to provide just punishment;
- to create adequate deterrence;
- to protect the public; and
- to provide the defendant with necessary treatment and training. Section 3553(a)(2).

In sum, "th[e] mandatory system [embodied in § 3553(b)] is no longer an open choice," Booker, 543 U.S. at 263, and the district court's duty is to impose the least amount of time necessary to achieve § 3553(a)'s purposes. The Guidelines range is subordinate to that duty.

For a number of reasons, Mr. Green believes that a sentence of seven years is sufficient but not greater than that necessary to meet the directives of 18 U.S.C. §3553(a).

A Sentence of Seven Years is Appropriate in This Case

A. A Sentence of Seven Years is Just Punishment

(1) The crack/powder disparity justifies a below-guidelines sentence.

Mr. Green accepts responsibility for possessing crack cocaine with the intent to distribute it, and stands ready to suffer the consequences. Those consequences are harsh.

Congress, at long last, seems to grasp this. Senators Joseph Biden and Orrin Hatch, and Representative Charles Rangel individually have sponsored legislation to either equalize or reduce the disparities between sentences for powder and crack cocaine: S. 1711 and H.R. 460 would set a single mandatory minimum at the current powder cocaine levels and eliminate the five-year mandatory minimum for simple possession of crack cocaine; S. 1685 would increase the amount of crack cocaine necessary to trigger the five-year mandatory minimum from 5 to 25 grams, and the ten-year mandatory minimum from 50 to 250 grams.

The federal bench has long voiced dissatisfaction with the crack guidelines. The Judicial Conference's Criminal Law Committee helped persuade the Sentencing Commission to make the recently enacted crack guidelines amendments retroactive. U.S. District Judge Paul Cassell's letter to the Commission, dated November 1, 2007, stated in no uncertain terms the Judicial Conference's "view that the disparity between penalties for powder cocaine and crack cocaine is not supportable and harms public confidence in the federal judiciary."

The debate engendered by the crack-powder disparity is now, it appears, evolving into something resembling a consensus that both the relevant statutes and sentencing guidelines are grotesquely unfair. In Kimbrough v. United States, 128 S.Ct. 558 (2007), the Supreme Court declared that "the crack/powder disparity produces disproportionately harsh sanctions, i.e.

sentences for crack cocaine offenses 'greater than necessary' in light of the purposes of sentencing set forth in § 3553(a)." 128 S.Ct. at 675. Kimbrough's declaration is now finding its voice in the courts of appeal. In United States v. Medina Casteneda, 511 F.3d 1246, 1248 (9th Cir. 2008), for example, the district court rejected the defendant's request that it consider the powder/crack disparity in determining his sentence. Medina Casteneda, 511 F.3d at 1248-49. The Ninth Circuit remanded and directed that the district court reconsider the defendant's sentence "in light of the Kimbrough decision and to determine whether the disparity between crack and powder cocaine produced a sentence 'greater than necessary' under § 3553(a). Id. at 1249. Kimbrough and Medina Casteneda each confirm that the crack/powder disparity is a relevant factor to consider under § 3553(a).

Apropos of this disparity, the court in United States v. Barsumyan, 517 F.3d 1154, 1159 (9th Cir. 2008), observed that "[i]f the operation of one particular guideline has inappropriately distorted the final range calculation, that is one factor which the district court may take into account in determining the final sentence." Here, the crack cocaine guideline, as compared to the applicable powder cocaine guidelines, distorts the final calculation. Were Mr. Green to be sentenced under the 1:1 ratio recommended by the Sentencing Commission, the base offense level would be 12, based on 13.4 grams of cocaine. See USSG § 2D1.1(c)(14). The resulting guidelines range, even assuming Criminal History Category VI, would be 30 to 37 months. Mr. Green is not asking for such a sentence, but is instead requesting a sentence that would be well above what he would face based on powder cocaine.² A sentence of seven years, based in part on the powder/crack disparity, would ensure that the sentence was based on the nature of the offense and would adequately deter criminal conduct.

Mr. Green's status as a career offender would set a default offense level of 32 and

²⁴

Criminal History Category VI, based on the offense statutory maximum for distributing 13.4 grams of cocaine powder, namely 20 years. Even as a career offender, however, Mr. Green would "only" face 151 to 188 months upon a guilty plea. As discussed post, the Career Offender provision also distorts the range of punishment in Mr. Green's case.

(2) The career offender provision is inconsistent with § 3553(a).

The career offender guideline range is both extraordinarily severe and markedly unlikely to promote sentencing purposes prescribed by the guidelines. See USSC, Fifteen Years of Guidelines Sentencing: An Assessment of How Well the Federal Criminal Justice System is Achieving the Goals of Sentencing Reform, at 133-34 (2004). A bit of background is necessary to see why this is so.

The genesis of the career offender provision is 28 U.S.C. § 994(h), which suggests that career offenders be sentenced near the statutory maximum. By its terms, the statute is directed to the Sentencing Commission, not the courts. The Senate Report explained that it "was added to the bill . . . to replace a provision . . . that would have mandated a sentencing judge to impose a sentence at or near the statutory maximum for repeat violent offenders and repeat drug offenders." S. Rep. No. 98-225 at 175 (1983). The Sentencing Commission, however, rather than employing an empirical approach³ to the career offender provision by examining past sentencing practices, instead keyed the offense levels to statutory maximum sentences. USSG §4B1.1(b)(A) - (G).

The government has argued in other cases that a sentence below the career offender guideline range based on the reasoning in Gall would nullify § 994(h), but the argument has not been well-received. In United States v. Martin, 520 F.3d 87 (1st Cir. 2008), affirming a 91-month downward variance from the career offender guidelines, the court found the argument to be "wide of the mark. The Supreme Court's recent decision in Kimbrough, 128 S. Ct. at 574-75, opened the door for a sentencing court to deviate from the guidelines in an individual case even though that deviation seemingly contravenes a broad policy pronouncement of the Sentencing Commission." Id. at 96. As the Second Circuit trenchantly has observed, "Congress did not intend § 994(h) to deprive the courts of authority to impose on a career offender a prison term that is not near the statutory maximum." United States v. Sanchez, 517 F.3d 651, 662-65 (2d Cir. 2008); see also United States v. Boardman, 528 F.3d 86, 87 (1st Cir. 2008) (remanding to permit district court to consider sentence below the career offender guidelines).

The Supreme Court noted that it was "fair to assume" that a guideline range "reflect[s] a rough approximation" of sentences consistent with §3553(a)'s objectives because the Commission had taken an empirical approach, i.e. examining past sentencing practices, in formulating many of the guidelines. Rita, 127 S.Ct. at 2464-65.

The foregoing makes clear that the career offender guidelines – more often than not, and most certainly in Mr. Green's case – do not consist with, much less advance, the goals of §3553(a). Here, the career offender guidelines increase Mr. Green's total offense level from 21 to 31. At Criminal History Category VI, this translates to an increase from a guidelines range of 77-96 months to 188-235 months. In other words, Mr. Green faces a sentence at least nine years higher because of the career offender classification. Application of this classification will "inappropriately distorted the final range calculation," Barsumyan, 517 F.3d at 1159, and the Court accordingly should impose a sentence that more appropriately reflects the directives of §3553(a).

Mr. Green is caught in the crossfire from two draconian guidelines provisions: the crack/powder disparity as exacerbated by the career offender provision. Each provision, standing alone, suggests an unduly harsh sentence; together, they result in a potential sentence that simply is not supportable.

(3) Mr. Green has shown himself capable of rehabilitation.

Mr. Green made an honest and dedicated effort to rehabilitate himself upon his release from prison. As Sheila Harris, Mr. Green's mother, describes in a letter to the Court, Mr. Green came home determined to make a better life for himself. He experienced the frustration of having his criminal history severely limit his prospects for employment, but persisted until he got a job. He cared for his relatives and involved himself in the lives of his children, who had been adversely affected by the absence of a mother who couldn't be troubled to care for them. His parole records reflect that he kept in constant contact with his parole officer, did well on his job, and, except for two positive drug tests, complied with the conditions of his release.⁴

Had he not lost his job following the death of his employer, fate may have written a different outcome. Mr. Green's depression, however, got the better of him and he again began abusing painkillers. The consequences of Mr. Green's addiction to painkillers cannot be overstated. After being shot in the arm at age 20, Mr. Green began using Valium, Vicodin and other codeine-based drugs on a daily basis and in amounts up to 500 milligrams. PSR, ¶¶ 49, 51. He was in fact clearly under the influence at the time of the charged offenses. A video recordings of one of the charged transactions shows Mr. Green, glassy-eyed and unsteady, speaking almost incoherently to the informant.

Mr. Green nonetheless is optimistic about his future. He presently is working on obtaining his GED, and, as the letters from family and friends attest⁵, he can draw from the support of those close to him.

For all these reasons, Mr. Green asks that the Court impose a sentence of seven years.

D. A Sentence of Seven Years Will Create Adequate Deterrence

Mr. Green has only one prior prison sentence, and that sentence resulted from an assault conviction. He has suffered no subsequent convictions or arrests involving firearms, and the Court may presume that his prison sentence has adequately deterred him from possessing firearms.

He previously served 210 days for a drug offense. A sentence of seven years therefore is twelve times as long as any previous punishment for a drug offense, and two years more than the sentence imposed for his assault conviction. Further, a seven-year sentence, when considered in conjunction with the more intensive supervision employed by the U.S. Probation Office, creates an environment sufficiently restrictive to deter Mr. Green from re-offending.

A copy of his parole records is attached as Exhibit A.

⁵ Copies of these letters are attached collectively as Exhibit B.

E. Protection of the Public

The requested sentence similarly will protect the public. Mr. Green is not eligible for probation and will not be released back into the community for a substantial period of time. During that time, he will have access to programs and counseling, and be better equipped to address and deal with the issues that have caused problems in his life.

F. A Seven-Year Sentence Will Permit Necessary Treatment and Training

Mr. Green's substance abuse problems are acute. His participation in RDAP, the Residential Drug Abuse Treatment Program offered by the Bureau of Prisons, will permit him to overcome a persistent pattern of substance abuse.

4. Conclusion

For the reasons stated, Arrington Green respectfully requests that the Court impose a sentence of seven years.

Exhibit B

U.S. v. Arrington Green CR-08 00045 DLJ

Dear Judge Jensen,

My name is Sheila Harris and I am Arrington's mother. I just want to say, the person that stands before you is not all bad. He is a good father and a good son. I know his record shows different, but please believe that there is another side to my baby. When Arrington came home, he got a job with a Janitorial Service. He had filled out numerous applications and was so happy he was finally able to find a job and one that fitted all his needs. I worked in the mornings and he worked at night so we were able to help each other out a lot. He would take me to work, his twin boys to school, and my mother, who suffers from Alzheimer's and unable to care for herself, to my sister's house every morning after he got off work.

Arrington was devastated when the owner of the janitorial service died in a motorcycle accident. He felt as if the one person who had given him a chance to turn his life around was gone and he was back at square one. The company went out of business and Arrington was unemployed again. This took a huge toll on him because it was really hard to find a decent paying job with his record.

Arrington's twin boys Amonte and Devonte are seven years old. Their mother has been in and out of their lives since they were nine months old and I have had custody of them since then. When Arrington came home he dedicated a great deal of time to his children taking them places and doing things with them they had been missing out on because of the absence of him and their mother. He even tried to reconcile with her in an effort to get their family back together again. When that didn't work, he quickly took on the role of mother and father, making meals, going to school programs/conferences, and doing what it took to restore normalcy to their lives while their mother had decided not to be a part of their lives.

I started to notice my son go into a state of depression. He experienced let down after let down. He tried relentlessly to find a job, to no avail; his kids mother wasn't interested in taking an equal share of responsibility for their children; his grandmother was diagnosed with Alzheimer's; his aunt died in his arms from a sudden death due to a ruptured artery in her heart; and his big cousin was murdered. All these incidents occurred in a matter of months and I believe my son was affected by them. I think he resorted to drugs (using and selling) and the streets as a way to cover the pain and rejection he was feeling. I would try to help him out by giving him a little money here and there when I could. He felt bad taking it but he couldn't afford to turn it down. I guess Arrington decided to try and make money the wrong way and now it has cost him his freedom. My son is not some BIG drug dealer, he just made a BIG mistake.

Your Honor, I am asking that you please be lenient on my son. I know he broke the law and I know he must pay for that. All I'm asking is that you don't take him away for a long time. Please allow him a chance at rehabilitation and a chance to right his wrongs. His children need him desperately and they will be the ones who will suffer most from his absence.

Thank you in advance for your consideration in this matter.

Sincerely,

Sheila Harris

Dear Judge Jensen.

I am writing this letter in support of my brotherin-law Arrington Green. I am saddened by this horrible predicament he has gotten himself into. While I am a firm believer that if you do the crime you must do the time, I also believe your environment and circumstances play a big part in your everyday decision making and sometimes desperate times call for desperate measures.

when Arrington got out of prison, he was determined to make a better life for him and his children. We had countless conversations about jobs he applied for and job leads I had given to him. I had never seen him so excited and optimistic about his future.

When Arrington finally found a job he was on top of the world. He bragged about how he had to hurry home to get some sleep so he could pick up his children and mother and go to work. His happiness was short lived due the tragic death of his boss who died in a motorcycle accident. This was just the beginning of a streak of bad luck that Arrington and his family encountered. Arrington tried to move on and resumed his job search but was unsuccessful in finding a decent job with a felony on his record.

Judge, I know you see a lot of young men come through your courtroom whom have made bad decisions and consequently ended up in jail. While I know you have a job to do, I am pleading with you to consider more rehabilitation and less incarceration for my brothers and sisters who still have hope. I know we are all in control of our own destinies but sometimes we take chances due to extenuating circumstances. Arrington tried very hard to do right.

Please consider the lasting effect a long prison term will have on his two young sons. Please give him a chance to rehabilitate himself so he can become a productive citizen and make sure his sons don't travel down the same road. They need him for guidance now more than ever as these are the years when they learn skills that will help them succeed in life.

To Whom It May Concern:

I have known Arrington Green for three and half years on a professional basis. I have had the opportunity to both engage and interact with Arrington in the Latchkey program his boys attended.

In my interactions with Arrington, I can confirm that he is a man of great integrity, is very dedicated to his family, and is honest. In my experiences with Arrington he has always been respectful, courteous, and willing to help out whenever needed.

Furthermore, Arrington has always proven to be dependable and has demonstrated the ability to avert a crisis and provide support or seek support whether personal or family. Arrington is selfless in giving of himself and always open to helping the next person in need.

For your information, I am a Homeless Services Case Manager who has the opportunity to interact and observe behaviors of various people on a regular basis. Arrington has remained appropriate in his display of behaviors regardless of the situation presented to him and he has always been conscientious about his personal presentation.

Sincerely,

Michelle Wilson

To Whom It May Concern:

My name is Linda Lambie and I am a teacher at Fairmont Elementary School in El Cerrito, California.

This year I have had the pleasure of having Devonte Green in my first grade class. I also know his brother, Amonte Green, as he is in the other first grade class.

I have met the boys' father, Mr. Arrington Green, as well as their grandmother, Mrs. Sheila Harris. Mr. Green not only attended our scheduled Parent-Teacher Conference in November 2007, but also brought the boys to our school's Annual Family Holiday Potluck in December 2007, where the boys performed a song with other first graders.

I have also had chances to speak with him at various times during the school year when he would come after school to pick up his boys. He always seemed interested in their work and their progress in school.

Thank you,

Linda Lambie

Dear Judge.

This letter is on behalf of Arrington Green and the impact of a lengthy incarceration. It will cause a great hardship on his children. Arrington was taking care of his twin boys without the help of their mother. And from what I observed, the boys loved him dearly. The boys are now without a mother and father in their life. I realize that Arrington has committed a crime and should be prosecreted. However, please keep in mine the impact of a lengthy incarceration on his 7 year old twin boys.

Uncle,

To Whom It May COncern:

My name is Paige Levias and I am Arrington Green's only nice. My uncle is one of the many suppoerters in my Grandma's, Shiela Harris, complicated life. Since his recent arrest my grandma has tooken on more stress than usual. He has been a humongous help with her schedule. As you may already know my grandma is the guardian of both Amontae and Devontae Green, which is another big obligation. My uncle presence has always been a positive detail to her life and theirs. For example, he helps take care of my great grandma, Lela Harris, who is 82 years old and needs a great deal of help. Since my grandma is almost aged herself and has been taking care of kids for over 32 years, my uncle could help out now and prevent trauma in my family.

Everyone makes mistakes that are not able to be repaired, but one has to be given a chance to justify their decisions with the ones that love them. Him bein oppressed in a "correctional facility" will only make it harder for him to rehabilitate himself inside and out. I love my uncle more than words can explain, and to see my family, whom I also have so much love for, suffer for his imprisonment kills me inside. And I know it kills my uncle. So please consider his release for the better of my family, especially his kids and mother.

THANKS, Paige A. Levias

TO WHOM THIS MAY CONCERN:

good hearted person, he's not perfect for if he was he wouldn't be in his present position. He loves his family with all his heart and helps us out when he's needed. Especially his mother and grandmother. He also helped his mother raise me. For instance, when I was younger he used to take me to different places. I am currently 17, but he still calls to check on me, makes sure I go to school and encourages me to stay on the right path. My uncle adores his kids, which is natural when a man has to be both the father and mother. He would always pick them up from school and play with them and do all sorts of activities with them. He helped his mother, Shiela Harris, and grandmother, Lela Harris, out a lot because his mom is currently taking care of her mother, who is not in a perfect condition, his kids and herself.

When my uncle got out of jail he was working, but his boss had passed in a motorcycle accident. He completed and solicited many applications, but he wasnt getting any responses. We know he's going to have to suffer from his mistakes, but please have mercy on him and give him another chance for the sake of his family and mostly children. Thank you for taking the time to read my letter.

To Judge D. Lowell Jensen,

My name is Krystal Barrett, one of Arrington Greens first cousins. Arrington Green compared to other young men is a great father to his children, wonderful son to his mother and an all around great person towards family and friends. Arrington spends a lot of time with his children, which included: taking and picking them up from school, going to every parent conference, and every school activity which he needed to attend and at times he would volunteer at the school where his children attends. Arrington even volunteered his time at my job which is the Coronado Y.M.C.A of the East Bay on October 31, 2007 for our haunted house event which his children participated in. Not to mention, when the weekends would come, he spent the whole entire day with his children. They would go to the park, beaches, movies, out to lunch and or breakfast, and whatever else would satisfy his children. Arrington helped his mother so much with his grandmother, and when he did that, he was helping two people at once. His mother works an eight hour shift, five days a week and also has to take care of her mother. That alone is a lot of work on her. Arrington would step in all of the time by helping his mother out by making groceries, cleaning the house, doing laundry, etc...This is very true about Arrington Green. Everyone has their downfalls and mistakes in life, but when you're a person as wonderful as Arrington, when it comes to his family and making sure that his priorities are taken care of, I feel that you deserve a second chance at life. I know that Arrington has to serve some time, but please don't let his time be to long. His children, mother, grandmother, and the rest of his family is in need of him because he is a help to all of us in his own way. Please take this letter into consideration.

Thank You,

Krystal Barrett

Dear Judge Jensen,

I am writing you on behalf of my nephew Arrington Green. Arrington is a nice, young gentleman and very family oriented. Especially when it comes to his children and mother. Arrington love to play sports and he teaches his children how to play them. He would show them when he would take them to the park, the beach, or even at his children school on the playground when he would go up there. He helps my baby sister, his mother out a lot with his grandmother. Arrington would come to the house to cook and clean without even being asked. That's just the type of person he is. Arrington also attended school parent conference meetings, participate with his children in the school activities, and willingly volunteered himself at their school. Arrington is a person that has a lot of potential and I wish that the sentence you would give him, is not that long. His children need him to be in their life and also his entire family.

Thank You,

Dorietha Barrett
